Obi, Duke, youths call for transparency and accountability in governance

By Daniel Anazda

FORMER governors of Anambra, Peter Obi, and Cross River, Donald Duke as well as youths have called for transparency and accountability in governance across all levels.

They spoke at the Nigeria Symposium for Young and Emerging Leaders, which took place yesterday at the Terra Kulture, Victoria Island, Lagos.

Themed "Open Governance: Improving Transparency and Accountability in Government", the event brought together leaders in politics, business, media, and more to discuss issues and challenges of open government and active citizenship.

Obi while speaking, decried the cost of governance in Nigeria, stating that the country needed a broad, comprehensive approach to address issues of budget inflation and corruption among public servants.

"The present cost of governance in Nigeria is totally unacceptable. Expenses of running the government in Nigeria is at the detriment of the citizens. Most Nigerians have no knowledge of the chairman of their local government, so how do you expect to keep them accountable?"

"Government should publish each item they want to buy for the citizens to see to compare the prices," he said.

Co-founder of BudgetIT, Seun Onigbinde, while affirming that citizens needed to demand answers from elected officials at all levels said: "Our leaders are yet to see Nigerians as people that need transformation. The realities of 2019 election will not be different from that of 2015.

"The present cost of governance in Nigeria is totally unacceptable. Expenses of running the government in Nigeria is at the detriment of the citizens."

"Nigerians need to demand for transparency all the time. The National Assembly spends 10 times the budget of other federal institutions in the country. Government serves the people, not the other way round. Nigeria is our collective responsibility, and as true citizens of this country, we need to find our voices," Onigbinde said.

Speakers at the event include former Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) Social Media Director, Deji Adeyanju; Demola Olarewaju, political strategist/analyst, and Japheth Omoluwat, founder and chief strategist, Alpha Reach.

Others are youth advocates Dayo Israel, Rinsola Abiola, Ayo Thompson, award-winning TV/Radio presenter, Seun Okinbaloye, political correspondent, Channels TV and Art Okpo.

Plateau PDP Tackles Lalong over Mid-term Failures

Governor: Claims are frivolous

By Seriki Adinyi in Jos

The Peoples Democratic Party (PDP) in Plateau State, has challenged the governor of the state, Mr. Simon Lalong, to explain how it spent over N97 billion he received in the first year of his administration. N15 billion taken as loan from commercial banks, N5 billion he spent on excise cars, and why his government could not commission a project in two years of the administration.

But, Lalong has immediately dismissed the figures touted by PDP and the allegations as frivolous and mischievous, aimed at scoring cheap political points.

Addressing journalists yesterday, the state Chairman of PDP, Mr. Danishi Sango, said the APC-led administration (APC) led administration in the state is marked by uncanny excuses for non-performance, and was always eager to take loan from banks.

Lalong tried to disparage his predecessor by setting up a judicial commission of inquiry, but where is the result to show for his own flagrant waste of state resources? Two years into governance, Lalong report card shows him on fall and low on credit.

"These are figures we can authenticate, APC should come out and contest it if they feel what we are saying is out of context. These are figures we can defend, we are engaging them with facts, let them come out," Sango challenged.

He added, "So bad is it that they cannot even celebrate fifty years of the existence of the state. Instead, commercial prayers sessions were organised. In addition, funds are being wasted on celebrating carnivals in a state where basic amenities cannot be provided; we have followed development in other states where golden jubilee celebrations were used to commission special projects. The Plateau State government, to the contrary, has nothing to commission."

But Lalong's Special Adviser on Media, Mr. Dan Marjano, said the PDP in the state was being economical with the truth and frivolous in its claim.

He challenged the party to come up with documentary evidence of all the money they alleged government had collected.

He added that there are a lot of projects completed by the Lalong's administration awaiting commissioning, and that it was not compulsory for the government to include commissioning of projects as part of the celebration of his two years in office.

"Commissioning is an item on its own which will soon be done in all the 17 local government areas of the state. Life does not begin and end with commissioning of projects; there are projects ready for commissioning across the state and that would be done at appropriate time."

"We refuse to be stamped by the so call opposition party, especially the PDP. We would not join issues with them because it has more problems at hand and my advice to them is to come up with constructive criticism that would advance democracy and governance in the state," he advised.
